I had always wanted to find a good "liturgical" home for the refrain of "Maika'i Ka Makani O Kohala," a most famous tune by David Nape (1870-1913), original text by William Sheldon (dates research pending). The tune of the refrain is after current practice, while the verses are loosely based on the 1899 Charles Hopkins book. Psalm 98, which I wrote in 1993 for Christmas Season, is also based on the latter's publication of "Ka Inuwai," the 19th century title of this song. The cheeriness of the melody aptly captures the spirit of all humanity singing fitting praise to the God the creator, the gracious and merciful judge and teacher of all the nations. Hawaiian refrain: R. Mondoy & P. Nogelmeier.
